5. Bookstore Update

As requested in a motion from the Faculty Senate, I met with the director of the bookstore to request that the bookstore carry a supply of books sufficient to equip all students in each course based on actual enrollments. The director explained to me that only about 30% of students when they over-order books. In general, they try to base their orders on the number of students in the class when it was previously taught and then order a percentage based on a number of factors, such as the availability of the book in other venues. I requested that he still increase the number of books that are ordered even if it is not for the entire class limit and explained the concerns from faculty that students are coming to class saying that the bookstore was out of their books.

We also discussed a variety of other alternatives for ensuring that students can purchase their books at the bookstore. The director agreed to increase communication to the faculty through email communication so that faculty understand the option for submitting book orders online and will know when the paper book orders have been sent to the department secretaries. I will continue to work with the bookstore director and encourage everyone to let me know if they are having difficulties with bookstore orders.
